PROJECT ON INCREASING JURIDICAL CULTURE OF THE POPULATION

PROJECT TIMEFRAME: SEPTEMBER 2006 – AUGUST 2007

FINAL ACTIVITY REPORT

PROJECT GOAL:

Creating an adequate framework for the general public's awareness raising, legal informing and education, as well as strengthening the capacities of interested stakeholders (representatives of NGOs, education and law institutions, local authorities) to address the problem of human rights protection and promotion.

SUMMARY OF ACTIVITIES:

Funds have been requested for:

1. Elaborating and publishing the Guide of Juridical Orientation, and
2. Carrying out 16 follow-up trainings in the localities where CPD has implemented the project on population's legal education, sponsored by USAID via ABA/CEELI).

1. "GUIDE OF JURIDICAL ORIENTATION"

The main tool in achieving our project goal is the Guide of Juridical Orientation that we elaborated along with a small group of national legal experts.

We are glad to notice that the idea to avoid publishing only a theoretical edition, and to offer to the Guide a dynamic and interactive allure was a good one. Thus, we consider that the biggest part of the success of the edition is due to the component dedicated to the answers to concrete questions having legal aspect, and the clear and simple explanation of a series of national and international legal norms and stipulations in different fields. The increasing number of addressing demonstrates the fact that people became more and more active and interested in various legal issues. As they see in the Guide an informative support based on the law, the persons are more open, they do not fear to ask, to put a question if they have a problem or hesitate in their actions.

The fact that the Guide of Juridical Orientation will be kept in the offices of local administration and the village public and school libraries will offer the readers the possibility to benefit from it for a longer period of time. We think that the Guide will not become outdate, given that it reflects issues of general interest.

As we expected, the readers of the Guide represent different categories of population, both from rural and urban areas all over the country. The way they learnt information about our publication differs from case to case: there are persons who heard the information broadcasted on radio and TV, others addressed to the mayor of the village or to the Center for Human Rights of Moldova with a personal problem; some of them, especially young women, went to the library and consulted our guide there; others, especially students, are periodically visiting our center's library and after having read the guide advised their colleagues and friends to come to our office to consult it. There are also persons who participated in the promotional meetings we organized in a series of localities, and then shared their impressions and opinions with other people.

2. FOLLOW-UP TRAININGS

🚦 BENEFICIARIES:

Direct beneficiaries:

- Community stakeholders (16 localities throughout the country): local public authorities, teaching staffs, heads of schools, kindergartens, libraries, houses of culture.
- NGOs dealing with issues related to human rights promotion and protection.

Usually, citizens from a particular community come with their problems to the local public administration offices. In this context, panel discussions and training with LPA employees assisted them in solving citizens’ problems. Most of LPA representatives lack a suitable legal training, thus the participation in our meetings offered them the opportunity to get informative support and methodological sources.

Indirect beneficiaries:

- Citizens who address various questions, based on particular or specific cases;
- People who obtain various information and support from the direct beneficiaries, and their family members;
- Readers of school and community libraries where the Guide of Juridical Orientation is kept.

1. Increase in citizens' level of knowledge about their social, economical and cultural rights stipulated in the national and international legislation.
2. Raised public awareness regarding the protection and observance of women's human rights, based on national and international documents.
3. Society's mobilization and encouragement to implement policies designed to protect women and children's rights.
4. Enhancement in population's informing on the latest amendments operated in the national legislation.
5. Increase in the level of women's participation.
6. Consolidation of NGOs' capacities to build partnership with the local public administration for carrying on activities designed to protect and promote human rights.

CONCLUSIONS:

Taking into consideration the fact that people, especially in rural area, meet problems concerning legal informing and access to legal bodies, we consider as absolutely necessary the meetings of the community stakeholders with professional lawyers. In the framework of these activities people benefit by information and juridical training, get the Guide of Juridical Orientation, legal counseling, including the possibility to address with particular problems of the community. We are sure that those meetings will continuously demonstrate their necessity and usefulness for the community. The fact that the NGOs and the local authorities are motivated to participate in the project activities will offer to other citizens the opportunity to benefit later by juridical informing and training.

Enichioi, Cantemir

Moreover, the Guide will constitute a long-term didactic support for all the direct and indirect beneficiaries of the project. It is kept in the libraries, offering to readers the possibility to benefit from the information included there for a longer period of time. It will not become outdate, given that it highlights issues of general interest.
